Money the Master

Interminably, in drawing room as well as Mart, Money talks, saying: 'Behold, I am lord of human life!" and human life, bowing, believes, nor dares to say it nay. It's inlove's limited monarchy, is the power of prime minister, the power behind the throne.

Money talks and the world in its orbit pauses, all ears. No wonder. It taiks in tones more unctuous than those of Suadela's self; has a way with it more irresistable than ever had Father O'-Flynn. Its speceh is what silence is said to be. More golden-throated than Caruso, it pursues the even tenor of its way as one who has it. Its victorious tongue la your proper Esparanto, your living Volaquk studied with what diligence needs not be stated.

Great a talker as is money, it talks but little to the poor, being too busy to say more to them than 'Howdo! Goodbye," in a breath. Thus, at least, cynics say of it.

Talking of cynles, what a cynic is money itself! What offhand clever, unkind things has it been known to say behind a man's back dubbing one bribe giver and another bribe taker! The diary of an observant well traveled dollar-what reading. How earned; how spent! Passing from what palm to what palm!

How entertaining soever the individuai dollar, writing objectively, might be, mouey, talking valnglorlously of itself, is the most sufferable of egotistsand that on a planet where all is van ity? "See," it sereams to arrest the attention of the passer-by. "I live in a palace, wear purple; therefore am 1 a king?" Or else in lower tones: The beauty wherewith I surround myself proves me cultured!" But, let it talk never so loud or with never such line art, by no manner of means can it deceive the least ponetrating of lackles, much less win golden opinions of the discerning. - Harry Cowell in the Smart

BIRTH OF A WING.

Evolution of the Aquatic Pupa Into the Dragon Fly.

Says a writer in the Scientific Amerlcan: "A wonderful spectacle is pre-sented by the sudden apparition of ct's wing at the its metamorphosis. The transforma-tion of the grub into the butterfly, tion of the grub into the butterfly, though familiar, is none the less amazing, but the evolution of the active and gossamer winged dragon fly from its ugly and singgish aquatic pupa is still more impressive. Early on a May mornhig the pupa emerges from its cocoon nt the bottom of n ditch, swims on its back by paddling with its long haired paws to the stem of an aquatic plant and climbs up out of the water. Then, nfter a momentary pause, the skin suddenly bursts open and the perfect insect appears, with closely folded wings, which soon unfold and assume their finnl form.

"The older naturalists thought that the insect 'swallowed air,' with which the wings were inflated. In reality the nir is absorbed in the digestitve organs, causing an increused blood pressure, which mechanically expands the wings. The presence of dew is also necessary; hence the first flight is niways made at dawn.

"This spectacle of the birth of a wlug may be observed in dragon files reared in an aquartum, the atmosphere of which should be moistened with an atomizer when the pupa rises to the surface."

COWBOYS OF SPAIN.

Splendid Horsemen, but They Use Their Spurs Without Mercy.

The perfection of Spanish horsemanship is to be seen among the vaqueros, gamideros and gurrochistas, by which various names the mounted herdsmen of the Andalusian plains are knownlu brief, what we should call a cowboy. Every farm seems to maintain a large number of these, for each herd, flock or drove hus its own herdsman, goatherd or swineherd, as the case muy be. The vaqueros are a fine looking lot of men. Tall, thin, light and loosely made, they look ideal horsemen, as, in point of fact, they are, though their mounts are poor.

The vnquero rides very high on a huge saddle, with a long stirrup and strnight leg, using a single rein and n very heavy curb, but he has such beautiful hauds that, although using this barbarous bit, he never cuts his horse's mouth about. It is different with the aulmal's sides, however, for he uses his spurs without mercy, and the white horses-of which there are a inrge number-all have ominous red stains behind the girths.

The tariff question cannot be settled by a tariff board, for it is not simply a matter of increasing or decreasing the tariff on certain articles. It is a question of principle as to whether the tariff should be used for the purpose of creating monopoly. Before a commission could do any good the American people must decide whether the tariff shall be for revenue merely or for the purpose of protection. If Birkhead at a handsome price. - Hartthe people decide in favor of protection a commission would not be ford Herald. necessary to emble the special interests to grab all they can get. If the people decide in favor of a revenue tariff then a commission could carry out the instructions of the people by adjusting the tariff schedales to that basis, in such a way us to cause no shock to fair business this is "Y. M. C. A. week" in Woodby reason of too sudden changes from the unnatural and artificial ford county, as you have doubtless disconditions that have grown up under a monopoly building tariff.

The doctrine of equal rights should be made a living, vital, conrolling force in Government. This doctrine opposes the privilege of subsidies, bounties and all forms of governmental favors to a few at the burden of all. The Government has no more right to take from per pound. Their average weight was one man indirectly to add to the wealth of another than it has to 26 1-2 pounds, and they brought $4.24 compel one man directly to contribute to the fortunes of another, each. It pays to raise them at that When such governmental favors are conferred they go to those of wealth and influence enough to secure them and are beyond the reach of the average man. If such favors benefited all alike, no one would want them. It is because they give a class privileges denied to others that modern science has discovered that these few clamor for them, and it is for this reason that the rest that worry will kill. We don't believe of the people should not submit to such discriminations. A privilege it. If it would, every newspaper man increases opportunity must aiminish, and as opportunity dimmishes the rights of the individual are destroyed. That is the reason why, under the Republican system, the classes are becoming more opulent and the masses are finding the opportunity for individual effort growing less as the years go by. Under this system in the large cities one end of society is rolling in abnormal wealth, while the other end of society is begging for bread. The multi-millionaire and the pauper are alike dangerous in a republic, and they are related to each other as cause and effect. If one were to receive a salary of ten thousand dollars a year he would have to save it all for five thousand years before he could accumulate fifty million dollars, yet fifty million dollars is not such a vast fortune as fortunes are counted today among those who have vast fortunes accumulated through the system of privilege. How is it that some men in the course of a few years can collect as bert and A. W. Babbage and later Jack much as under natural conditions it would take thousands of years Metcalf. - Pineville Sun. for the average man to earn? It could not be done if there were justice in the distribution of wealth.

We cannot bring about a forced equality of conditions, but there may be an equalization of burdens and opportunities. These "swol- race under the primary called for May len'' fortunes are for the most part grafted out of the public by 27. That is the best way to ascertain means of high tariff, watered stocks, fictitions bond issues and through the choice of the people. -Blue Grass monopoly of some necessity of life. Watered stocks, fictitious bond Clipper. issues and the tariff graft should be done away with, and holding companies whereby these unnatural fortunes are concentrated in the hands of a very few men should be placed under the ban of the law. Frankfort News have consolidated, Then through an income tax the burdens of government should be Governor Beckham retiring from the more equitably distributed. The income tax is a tax on what the editorship of the Kentucky State Jourpeople have, not, like the tariff, a tax on what the people wunt. It is nal. While Governor Beckham has the fuirest of all forms of taxation because it bears most heavily on those most able to bear it, and least heavily on those least able to and will hereafter devote himself exbear it. An income tax exempting the small incomes, and with a clusively to the law.—Glangow Times. very light rate up to, say, twenty thousand dollars a year, then increasing with the increase of the income until it would become less desirable for individuals to have incomes running into the millions each year, would do much to equalize the burdens of government and te remedy the injustice that now exists in the distribution of wealth.

The amendment to the United States Constitution now before the people is not in the exact form that it should be to permit the levy of the graduated income tax adjusted in this manner, nevertheless it is a step in the right direction, and I hope it will be adopted. Having gone that far we can go further later on.

The Democratic party should not fight wealth as such, but rather the privileges that produce ta nted riches on one hand and undeserved poverty on the other. It should not be an enemy to enterprise but the friend of honest industry and legitimate development. The only limitation should be that the prosperity of one should be consistent with the welfare of all, for it is an axiom of Democracy that whenever one man has more than he should have, some other man must have less than he should have. Democracy should safeguard property rights, but should recognize the fact that property rights are best safeguarded by preserving inviolate the public rights.

Shall there be government by privilege for a class or government by the people for all? This is the great question before the country. Government by the people is either right or it is wrong. If it is wrong, then this republic is the mightiest blunder of all the ages; if it is right, then the people cannot be given too much power to run their own government.

The election of Senators by direct vote of the people is an important step in government, not only of and by the people but government for the people. When our Constitution was being framed the fear was the people might confisente the property of the well-todo, who at that period consisted for the most part of large land owners. That the time should ever come when the rights of the people would be endangered through consolidation and concentration of eapital, and its influence in government, did not occur to the fathers of the republic. So they provided a House of Representatives to represent the people and for a Senate elected by the Legislatures of the different States to represent property. We have now learned that property interests should not be inconsistent with public interests, and that officials should represent no class but the entire public. This proposed reform of election of Senators by the people will, according proposed reform of election of Senators by the people will, according to present indications, bear fruit in the near future.

The Democratic party should insist upon the stamping out of graft and corruption from every department of government; not only grafts against the law, but grafts under the law, and those grafts the law itself may give in the shape of special tavors, bounties, subsidies and a tariff for any purpose other than that of revenue. Graft substitutes for government by the people, the will of the few with wealth and influence enough to secure official favors. In the elimination of corruption the initiative and referendum have been found effective in State affairs. As means of enacting all laws these measures would, of course, be too cumbersome, but as checks in the hands of the people course, be too cumbersome, but as checks in the hands of the people they are very desirable. #### A GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT AT MCQUADY.

Father Knue has started a good roads movement at McQnady. He called a mass meeting of the farmers in that vicinity and asked them to co-operate in improving the roads that lead to St. Mary's Church in the Woods. They decided for their first work to improve the roads one-half mile East, and the same distance West, North and South. The farmers furnish their labor, tools and teams free to haul the rock from the hills, and each man is sholding himself responsible for the success of the movement. The work has already begun under the skilled supervision of Father Knue, who says, "Come on," in stead of "Go ahead."

We believe that Father Knue has picked up the right shovel to make better roads. The matter of improving roads must be taken up first at a man's own gate by the man himself. There is plenty of available material in every part of Breckenridge county for building names of the new members." up the roads, and if the farmers all over the county would adopt Father Knue's system, we are safe in saying that every vicinity would profit greatly by it. The farmers and men of the county expect too much of the County Road Supervisor, and do not give enough aid themselves to obtain improved roads.

This town initiative at McQuady is excellent. If the citizens and they will--lend their thought and labor to Father Knue's plan, the place itself will be cleared of its mud-holes, the streets will be repaired and the town as a whole benefited. This personal system of work was tried in the building of St. Mary's church of the Woods, department of John P. That there is a spirit of good fellowship among the Kentucky a personal item is not complete unless editors is evident from the fact that not only the daily papers are giving space to the comments of the country press, but the weekly instance: Miss Louise Smith visited Mr. Willis, of Rosetta, wanted to know publications are giving more time to their exchanges. Several of the her cousin, Mrs. John Miller Sunday. why his items have not appeared for State papers are running a column devoted to "What Others Say," as The Jackson Times heads its clippings from the different news sheets. This idea which we think was started by Col, Walton, of The Lexington Herald, is becoming most popular, and is one that crystallizes a fraternal feeling among the members of the Kentucky Press. These gleanings also eliminate that breach of journalistic courtesy of copying an article from a newspaper without giving the publication credit. Such a generous interest as is manifested by the Kentucky editors in the enterprise of each other is laudable and will bring great benefits to them and to the State in general.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine"

Novelized by FREDERICK R. TOOMBS From the Great Play by PAUL ARMSTRONG

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

******** CHAPTER XI. IMMY VALENTINE entered his private office from the room where the new vanlt had been erected. He saw Rose Lane standing close to his desk, where Bobby was presiding with all the dignity that went with his age. The giri's eyes met bis, but only for an instant. Valentine lowered his gaze to the floor, his thoughts whiring rapidly through his brain.

True, at one time he had had serious thought concerning the beautiful young woman who had saved him from Sing Sing, from Warden Handler and the warden's favorite pastime of "solitaire."

But of late he had come to realize that he would be dolug her a lasting screng, a vital lainstice, to permit himself to make any serious advances toward her. She had been attracted by hlm. She was now even more interested in him. He was observing enough to learn this. As for his own emotions toward her? He loved her. That no one would deny who saw him in her company. He could not con ceal It. Even the Infnatlle Bobby had guessed what he had endeavored to make his secret. Yet he had realized plainly the nucertainty of his position At any moment the unexpected might happen, or, rather, the expected might happen, and some one would possibly uncover and reveal phases of his past that he would be unable to explain. Such had been the guidling thought of Jimmy Valentine in his social intercomse with the banker's daughter Juring his tenure as assistant cashler n the bank in Springfield, and now he saw more clearly than ever the wisdom of his course. Doyle-Doyle, the relentless tracker of men-had threatened to "get" hlm, and Doyle was aiways an element to be reckoned with.

Although floyle's threat had been made years before. Valentine had never underestimated the detective's ability nor his tennelty of purpose. While he, Valentine, had taken precautions which he thinly considered would prevent Doyle from getting n hold on hlm again, yet, after all, it was by no means definitely assured that he would not defeat the ex-convict in his nimbltion to live "on the square," therefore Valentine must under no circumstance make any serious ndvnuces toward Rose Lane. The burden of misery that might descend upon him would only be given greater weight.

Valentine desired to talk alone with Rose Lane, and after a lengthy conversation, punctitated by lavish promlses of limiting trips, sent the lad uwny to play with Kitty in the new vault, none other than the one time accounwhich for their jurpose became n smuggler's cave.

The assistant cashier stepped forward toward Rose, who stood close to his desk, resting her suble mnff on its polished top. "To what am I Indebted for this plensure?" he asked of her.

"Yourself." She stilled graciousty on him as she spoke.

Vnlentine drew near to her.

"11ow?"

"Don't you suppose I like you as weil as 'do the children?" she answered gayly.

"Do you?" he asked anxiously. "Yes, but why is it that you never do call on me nuy more?" she questioued repronchfully. "Well-because"- he became very uncomfortable. She must never know the true reason for his avoidance of

"What?" "Oh-ah-what were we taiking about?"

"As to why you don't call on me any more. Valentine struggled to think of a successful mode of escape from answering the question. "Well, now-don't you sec," he slammered. "Of course you do." He was pecoming more involved every mo-

The girl's smile began to fade, Rather grimly she interrupted him. "No, I don't see at all," was her aanonncement. She moved away from the desk.

"Weil. Miss Lane, 1"-The telephone bell rang at his desk. He beat forward and put the receiver to his ear. As he hing up the reeclver a clerk entered. "Will you have the cash now?" the employee asked. "In a few minutes."

No sooner had the clerk made fils exit when a messenger boy entered, bearing a telegram. Valentine tore it open, apologizing to Rose as he did The girl saw that the assistant cashier was very busy. She determined to leave him for the present.

As Valentine dismissed the boy she announced that If the press of business would not continue all day she would return. Valentine assured her that in a half four he would be at leisure and that he would sacrifice everything else in order to talk to her. She started toward the door, assuring him that she would return. As she opened the door she turned and cast a smile tu the direction of the assistnat cashler.

But Valeutine did not notice it. He did not see it. His eyes were gined to sidered the matter he dismissed that the slip of yellow paper that he field in his hand. The girl saw that as he read the telegram an expression of tenseuess, of mishblued excitement, face of the danger that he wisely no crept across his face. Wonderingly knowledged to himself to be vitally she softly closed the door. A few steps carried her before Valentine, who looked up in surprise, thinking she had gone.

"What is it-that telegram?" she gasped. "It's bad news for you-very bad," she went on. "I must know."

Valentine, undergoing a pronounced shock owing to the contents of the message which he held hi his hand, was almost completely mustrung by the interruption of the girl he loved. Was it not fate that prompted her to appear before film at the very moment

"Oh, It is nothing," he said weakly. "Merely a little business tangle-that

He stepped out from behlad his desk, crumpling the fateful telegram ia bis band, and gently led the girl to the door. "Itemember," he said, 'I have no engagement with you in a half hour."

"Look out," he read. "Doyle will be In town this afternoon at 4 to see you about na Important matter."

The assistant cashler dropped his chin Into his palm and stared vacantly at the opposite wall.

"Doyle," he muttered - "George Doyle. He said he'd get me if it took ten years-n lifetime. Weii, perhaps he can; then, ngaln, perhaps he cannot. At any rate, he can probably rain my eareer, my hopes, my standing here, where I have friends who believe in Valentine leaned back meditatively in his chair. The fatal telegram dropped nuheeded to the lloor. His month set determinedly. A new fire blazed in his eyes, the lire that had consumed him and had spurred film on when in the days and nights of the past he had ventured forth on a desperate enterprise. He would give George Doyle a race, that he would. He would match his wit against that of the skilled sleuth. He already had laid the basis for wint now unst be his course of procedure, and he believed that it would withstand even the ennning and force of George Doyle. At any rate, he could Valentine lenned forward and pressed a button. A clerk entered. The assistant cashler hesitated a moment, then spoke quickly.

"Tell the watchman to come bere," he directed.

The clerk nodded and went out in search of Red Flanagan-yes, Red, pilce of Jimmy Valentine, whom the intler, true to fils word, find taken with him in his attempt to "go it straight."

Flanagan must be told of the coming of Doyle, who was his sworn enemy also. In addition, Red would have to assist the assistant cashier, now known as Mr. Itandall, in the maueuver which the latter was about to execute. Then there was Avery-old Blil Avery. From the day that Vaientine had sent him nway from the hotel in Albany Avery had been making heroic efforts to live "on the square."

The three years that had elapsed since No. 1289 had advanced Avery, iong a "yeggmau" of the most desperate type, the price of a railroad ticket, bad made a revolutionary transformation in him. Today he was married, had a growing business and had performed for Valentine a service that was to render the vengeful efforts of George Doyle' much more difficult and some, what less effective than the detective would relish should be ever learn the truth,

Avery had been in communication with Valentine on various occasions in a secret manner. So carefully concealed, la fact, had been his moves that act even Ited Flanagan had obtained the slightest knowledge of them.

True, Red was aware that Valentine had received various juzzling communications from one "Mr. t'ronin." but how was Red to know that Mr Cronla was Blil Avery unless the assistem cashler was pleased so to inform him, which he was not?

At first Valentine had had the belief that some friend was responsible for the sending of the waruing telegricin,

"I WILL REMEMBER."

but now that he more calmly conthought. Another Iden fixed Itself in his brain, which would cause film to govern his actions accordingly in the alarming. At any cost he must prevent Doyle from turning Rose Lane and her father agalust him. They had trusted him-they alone-in the first instance. and so It would be wit against wit to defeat Doyle and, If need be, life against life.

The minutes passed. What could be the matter with the clerk or with Red? Had the watchman, too, recelved a warning? And if so had he followed the impulse that had first come to allmmy Valentine, to tice-the time honored resource of the crook. the time honored confession of the crook, tlight? The uniform-that was it. The bluegray coat and trousers, loosely fitted, and the peaked cap, bearing in gold letters "Watchman," were the actual causes of his transformation, so far as ontward indications were concerned. As for the inward changes-those gulte fildden from the Imman eyewell, there were but two persons who could describe how they had come about. Those two persons were Red Flaangan and Jimmy Valentine.

Red stood before the assistant cashler and doffed his imposing watchman's cap.

"Want me, Randall?" he asked. "Yes." He looked away from Red, nawilliag to break to film the news that Doyle was on their track.

The latter stored anazedly at the assistant cashier, trying to guess as to whether or not he was telling the truth. Well, there was a scrapbook. That would afford ready means of proving Valentine's words. Red pieked up the book and swiftly skimmed the pages. His attention was held by one of the clippings. He read afond:

not sell unclouded titles to laws. These measures have materially nided in eliminating corruption in Missouri by reducing the incentive for corruption, Instead of being inconsistent with representative government, they insure government that is representative of the people and not of privilege. They conserve the rule of the people. These have been found to be entirely practical in the States, and Democracy should favor these measures, properly safeguarded, for such governments.

A national anti-lobby law, applicable to Congress, would be conducive to popular government. Such a law for the national governsnatched even one bundle?" asked ment as we have in Missouri would be beneficial, whereby lubbyists for special interests are required to register in a public record stating whom they represent, how much they are getting and how long they "Well, you better get me out of intend to stay, and making lobbying a felony without such registration. This gives publicity to the workings of lobbyists and lobbyists of the objectionable kind will no more operate in the glare of publicity than bals will fly in the blaze of day. Privilege keeps its hired agents constantly infesting the balls of Congress, influencing legishitors in order that the few may reap what the many sow. Let the light be turned on so the people may know who they are and what they are doing. Publicity is the surest remedy for corruption. The sugar trust frauds, the Indian steals, the friar lands seemdal, the Pananna canal corruption and the Alaska swindles should have the curtains drawn from them in order that all may perceive the anarchs of corruption in their bacehanal of avarice.

The Democratic party should insist apon the vigorous enforcement of the people's laws against high and low, rich and poor. We do not need new laws so much as we need the honest, sincere enforcement of the laws we already have. Holding the operators of corporntions individually responsible to the criminal laws for lawless corporate acts, would accomplish more in correcting lawlessness of corporate interests than all the fines that could be imposed upon corporations from now until doom's day.

The party should favor the regulation of the rates of public utility corporations upon a reasonable basis that justice be done the people and a fair return be given on the amount actually invested. It should not be forgotten that the public is a partner in every corporation and is entitled to know what is going on, especially is this true of public service corporations.

It is a question for us now not of founding a new party, but of the preservation of the ideals of the old party. Not the formation of east of Cloverport. a new government but the purification of a nation's life; not the conquest of foreign foes but the subjection of those within. The capacity of a people for self-government is not to be proven by the glitter of wealth, nor bravery on battlefields, nor by the extent of a nation's dominion, but by the happiness and welfare of the average man. The dangers of today are not from without, but from within. Selfishness, greed, avariee, privilege, the decay of public virtue, those who would subvert the public functions of government to sordid uses-these are the enemies we have to fear. There can be no peace between these back to the alluring tray. He was drawn to it as the nerveless rabbit them without being recreant as Democrats and traitors to our better mitures. It is not enough for us to rest upon the splendid history of the Democratic party, there must be hopes and aspirations for the future as well as history and records of the past. No man, no nation, no party, can stand still. We must progress or decay, we must grow better or we will graw worse.

Stangpat Republicanism says to a man, "Come with us and we will give you a high tariff enabling you to make money at the expense of your fellowmen. Come with us and we will give you a subsidy or bounty affording you an advantage over others." Progressive Democracy says, "Come with us. We cannot offer you any advantage over others, but we can promise that no one else shall have an advantage over you." The one appeals to avariee and greed; the other appeals to manhood and conscience. One stands for the sellish riches of the few; the other for the welfare of all. True Democracy cannot give a privilege enabling you to rob others, but it can deny others the privilege of rnbbing you. It would confer upon you the right to the rewards of labor in proportion to your industry and intelligence, and it would give all others the same opportunities. This is the doctrine of the common good-the religion of democracy.

HAVE you ever tried to sell your old clothes? 'The only way you can sell them is to talk about them, show them and keep after the person until you get the money in your pocket-book. It's the same way with everything else-you have to talk about it before you can sell it—and the best way to be heard is through the home paper. Put an ad. in the want column at 1c a word, an ad. in the locals at 10c a line and you will sell that old stove, that baby buggy or gasoline engine. This can be done through
